

Fryni Doa-Kakoyianni is a Lecturer of French and Comparative Linguistics in the Department of French Studies and Modern Languages at the University of Cyprus. She was published in international journals and volumes. She edited volumes and collections herself, and is the co-author of numerous articles on relevant domains. She has taught, designed and coordinated courses in linguistics, grammar, syntax, phonetics and didactics for French as a second / foreign language. Her research interests include comparative linguistics, corpus linguistics, morphosyntax, grammar, French as a second/foreign language (teaching, learning, using multimedia and other audio-visual material), pedagogical methods, material development, phonetics, semiotics, dialectology and neurolinguistics.

Apart from directing and coordinating undergraduate and postgraduate studies of the Department of French Studies and Modern Languages at University of Cyprus, she currently supervises three doctoral dissertations in her research areas. At present, she also coordinates the Source Corpus research project (<http://sourcecorpus.eu>). Moreover, she is a representative of the Faculty of Humanities in the Language Board of the Language Centre and in the Centre for Teaching and Learning at the University of Cyprus. She is a member of the Graduate School member at the University of Cyprus and member of professional committees and boards (Ministry of Education and other organizations) deciding on critical educational matters such as syllabi, teaching methodology and assessment, national and international exams and rewards.